

Oakbrook Terrace, Illinois, Monday July 30, 2007 – Construction Resource Technology, Inc (creators of www.BidTool.net) announced today that it has deployed its free construction directory in a series of new services slated for rollout of Q3 2007. The BidTool project service, (currently tracking more than 4,700 out to bid and in design projects) offers up massive content and project tracking features in the Midwestern Great Lakes region and Colorado. Co-CEO Christine Tripodi says “Our philosophy with the new directory is totally counter to what most of the competition offers today. We listened to the commercial construction industry: they told us what they wanted- access to complete verified company profiles all searchable by: company name, region, type with sub classification search using the 2004 CSI Masterformat. Many companies requested additional search functions that much of the competition does not offer. We provide that and the ability to drill down quality results by county, zip code and government classification. We feel these verified companies and extra features out us out in front of the pack.”

Construction Resource Technology, Inc. deployed a department with one important mission- call and confirm every possible detail on every active company in the commercial construction industry and put it into a free online database for all to enjoy. Still adding to its massive database MyConstructionResource.net is now poised to take advertising orders for premium placement.
